SA Launch of New Website to Help Australians Better Manage Their Finances

Amanda Rishworth MP, Federal Member for Kingston joined Parliamentary Secretary to the Treasurer, David Bradbury MP to launch the Government's new MoneySmart website at the Stables Christian Centre in Huntfield Heights today.

Ms Rishworth said "This website will mean that older residents in our community will be able to access plain-English information and online tools to help them get on top of their finances and to plan for their retirement.

"Moneysmart.gov.au provides people with free access to a toolkit of online resources, including budget planners, credit card and mortgage calculators as well as comprehensive information about superannuation."

Ms Rishworth said that it was fitting to launch this new website at the federally funded Stables Christian Centre Seniors' Kiosk which provides a venue for local senior residents to get together and learn more about computer technology.

Ms Rishworth said "It is great to have the launch of this new website at the Seniors' Kiosk which provides seniors in our community with free access to broadband and assistance to help them gain confidence with computer technology."

Ms Rishworth said that the website will be a great tool, not only for older Australians but for people of all ages, to take a financial health check and access free guidance when making important financial decisions.

Ms Rishworth said "The Gillard Government wants people to be better informed about the choices they make so that they can take control of their own finances, and this website will help people to do just that."
